Abstract

An online survey has been developed for use in assessing bullying in secondary schools and for conducting social norms interventions. The survey reveals attitudes about bullying, incidence levels of bullying behavior as reported by perpetrators and victims and also assesses perceived norms among peers regarding these attitudes, bullying behavior, and experiences as victims. Results from more than 10,000 students from 19 schools show that while bullying is substantial, it is not the norm. The most common (and erroneous) perception, however, is that the majority engage in and support such behavior. Multisite analysis reveals that perceptions of bullying behaviors are highly predictive of personal bullying behavior—more so than actual school norms. Examples of media created to reduce harmful misperceptions about bullying will be presented.
